WASHINGTON, October 25, 1868.

A letter has been received by Dr. E. F. Whitney, of this city, from a gentleman in Portage, Ward county, Ohio, enclosing a copy of a forged certificate of nomination, which purports to have been issued here on the first day of October, 1868, and signed by A. G. Hoyt, Probate Judge of Richland county. The certificate was given to Martin Bolt on the morning of the election, and he was told to vote the ticket which he did. Some fifty votes were cast in the same township—similar papers, purporting to be issued in different counties. The man who furnished these fraudulent papers has been arrested and held to bail in the sum of fifteen hundred dollars. None of the persons named as Probate Judge witnesses are known to have ever been in this county. The name of the real Probate Judge is not Hoyt.

Johnson and Lowe, the Vice-admiral of the Province of Nova Scotia, and Commissioner Wilmot, on the subject.

THE DEMOCRATIONS IN ORLEANS.

WASHINGTON, October 24, 1868.

The Democratic Imbroglio.

The entire organ of the Democratic managers here, this morning, opening fire on the National committee, and it is supposed with having been instructed to do action by the New York members, who are ready to sacrifice the success of the general ticket with hope of carrying New York State and securing its option. The intelligence, to a very little extent this morning, operating for those who have been urged the change, appeared not to exhibit upon the National Committee, and hope it has been necessary to be true, and that it has only aroused itself now to work New York to the Democratic ring, and that it is getting come to most of Seymour's ability at leaving himself to be united out as the last moment, and to save the general ticket but in the interest of the entire Democratic ring. It is no suggestion to have a change of candidates, either through the National or State Committees, but only that the head by some of the weak leaders of the party, and might, if adopted, even set present defeat.

Democrats All Right.

Judge Kelley returned from Delaware to-night. He reports that the Republicans of Delaware are confident of carrying the State by from three thousand majority. He says the Democrats are not going to make a fight, and that they have literally done nothing while the Republican Committee have been hard at work day and night; it argues that the Democratic leaders have left to talk to themselves, and have given up the contest in disgust, done nothing. It announces to Indianapolis with a good deal of bitterness, but despair to hope that they can be beaten in October. It was not nothing favorable for the Democratic Committee, and that the October elections are going against them, and says that the Democratic leaders are a set of politicians adventurers, whose gubernatorial is wholly that of gaolers.

Indignant at Seymour.

All the Blair Democratic leaders are greatly incensed at Seymour's indirect assaults upon Frank Blair. They assert that anything of the kind coming with such bad grace from the man who was really nominated by bribery, while the man he assails was the choice of the convention on the first ballot. Vice President, many of them say that Seymour must be crazy to think that he can have the convention acting against him by defeating Mr. Blair, and "carrying ground" for himself.

The Constitution in Arkansas.

The late constitution in Arkansas were not unexpected here. Evidence which came to the editorial room in the hands of the Democratic Committee of Congress, showed that secret organizations for the purpose of suppressing existed in several parts of the State, and that attempts would be made against the form of government lately adopted. Some of the leaders have all along been in favor of organizing a confederate county of Texas as the leading spirit of these bands, all of which act in concert with each other. Mr. Brooks, member of the present Congress, killed on Friday, was an officer in a Confederate regiment, and commanded South at the decline of the war. Mr. Brooks, shot at the same time, was one of the leading Republicans in the State, and a prominent candidate for United States senator.

Betting on the Result.

Information from the gambling circles of New York, as to the effect that exercise are becoming to be found in small degree in Seymour, while in the late betting on Hoffman and Griswold, odds have been generally in favor of the latter.

A Blow from a Sunday Organ.

The Sunday Democratic paper of this city substantially follows the lead of the Intelligencer as to the cause of labor feeling of this political situation. It denies the Democratic National Committee any responsibility for the opposition in strong terms, and says that during the last year they have literally done nothing, while the Republican Committee have been hard at work day and night; it argues that the Democratic leaders have left to talk to themselves, and have given up the contest in disgust, done nothing. It announces to Indianapolis with a good deal of bitterness, but despair to hope that they can be beaten in October. SMALL NOTES.

Hasn the Democracy backbone enough to bowl-of compromise for McArdle? They know very well who McArdle is. McArdle is the gentleman who has been elected to Congress by the Democracy of the Ninth Ohio District, and has just been arrested for forging checks with fraudulent naturalization papers. We ask the Democracy of Western Pennsylvania if they are going to stand idly by and make no movement in defense of this bad egg? Is a feeble cause? If there cannot save him, they can start a subscription for the man who furnished Western Pennsylvania with fraudulent papers, and at the very least pass resolutions of sympathy and confidence. Where is the Chairman of the county, the city and Executive Committee? Something should be done for the martyr McArdle immediately.

Seymour is not addicted to making enthusiastic speeches. There is nothing encouraging in him of his speeches, on the contrary, there is a vein of misery running through all the speeches he has delivered. This fact has been remarked more than once by gentle-women people. But it is quite natural. He feels as he speaks—mournful, downhearted, disheartened. It is not in the nature of things for a man to make a hopeful inspiration to get off a sparkling, hopeful, encouraging, enthusiastic speech, and people who expect it are altogether unreasonable.

The World calls frantically on the party to "bring up the reserves." This would be all very well if there were any reserves to bring up. The truth is, the regular force, generous, old guard and all, besides Judge Sharswood's naturalization mills, were engaged in October, and badly beaten.

No allowances should be made for the fact that Seymour has recently avoided himself of the privilege usually accorded orthodoxy by not being required to pay the penalty of an outraged law. He is making his dying speech. Under such circumstances, none indulgence may be allowed him.

Many persons have experienced not a little surprise at the continued silence of Governor Seymour. Seward, who, it was understood, would confine in favor of Grant and Colfax and heartily give his business. The New York Times, which partakes of this feeling, makes the following sound suggestion to the Seymour party:

FINANCE AND TRADE.

PITTSBURGH, Monday, October 26, 1868.

The most prominent feature in the financial market during the week just closing was the success of the combination formed in New York, to lock up large sums of money. This scheme was accomplished by the usual methods of advancing rates for borrowed funds, and also, have carried out their programme thus far very satisfactorily. The struggle, however, is thought not to be ended as yet, for the funds drawn into the Sub-Treasury, or the bank vaults generally, will be kept there for some time, in order to facilitate the movement of the crops, by enabling cotton and breadstuffs to be moved, in moving cotton and the staple products have contributed to influence the advance. In reference to the combination formed in New York, it is understood that the leaders of New York city banks had their eye in creating the present money difficulties, and those banks which had the nerve and integrity to keep out of the unholy alliance, gave a quiet support to the movement of their associates, by the free loaning of money, even to the extreme limit upon their capital. This recommendation is due to the Bank of the Republic, and the Metropolitan and Merchants' Bank of gold in operation, it would be very likely to result in much the same opposite of that desired. It would put such funds as they now have out of the commercial channels, and thus add to the stringency. The Bank of the Republic, however, has been very liberal in its loans, and has thus contributed to relieve the stringency. In reference to the combination, it is understood that the Western banks brought to the New York city banks their aid in creating the present money difficulties, and those banks which had the nerve and integrity to keep out of the unholy alliance, gave a quiet support to the movement of their associates, by the free loaning of money, even to the extreme limit upon their capital.
